"Real stories. Visible values. Repeatable impact." Then: "One person's story can light the way for others." That light is the thread through everything that follows.

02 · The question stop 2 of 4 · Think of one moment

One thing first: Nouf, whom you will follow today, is an illustrative story, not a specific colleague. Now think of one moment that made work better. Who else ever heard about it?

When was the last time a colleague inspired you?

• HELPED

A colleague stepped in when support was needed.

• SUPPORTED

Someone went the extra mile for another person or team.

• IMPROVED

A small action solved a problem or made work easier.

• INSPIRED

The behaviour could help others — if they could see it.

These moments tend to look like four things. Someone helped. Someone supported another person or team. Someone improved how the work gets done. And some could inspire others, if people could see them.

The link is the shared story. Once shared, it reaches the organisation twice: a stronger recognition culture with our values in action, and more engagement, collaboration and a better employee experience.

04 THE CYCLE

05

09 · The cycle · stop 1 of 3 · What is new · two lanes

Most recognition runs the top lane: an achievement earns recognition, and we keep that. But it ends there; the behaviour stays where it happened. The bottom lane keeps going: an experience becomes a story, the story shows a behaviour, that inspires someone, and more stories follow.

PARTICIPATION

Nominations, completion rate and representation across groups.

REACH

Story views, completion, shares and channel reach.

RECOGNITION

Employees featured, perceived fairness and feeling valued.

REPEATABLE BEHAVIOUR

Story recall, intention to repeat and reported action.

14 · Measure stop 2 of 3 · Four gantries · baseline

Think of a measurement lane, like the sensor gantries on our roads. Every story passes four: participation, reach, recognition and repeatable behaviour. Each readout says baseline, because the pilot has not started and we will not put a number on it before there is one.

PILOT OUTCOME

Measure whether visibility becomes behaviour.

The pilot should prove participation, reach, recognition and repeatable learning.

PARTICIPATION

Nominations, completion rate and representation across groups.

REACH

Story views, completion, shares and channel reach.

RECOGNITION

Employees featured, perceived fairness and feeling valued.

REPEATABLE BEHAVIOUR

Story recall, intention to repeat and reported action.

BASELINE → AFTER ONE QUARTER

14 · Measure stop 3 of 3 · Baseline after one quarter

We already have the baseline: recognition reach is 8% today, and the visibility gap is 56%. At quarter end we re-ask the same eight questions. The results feed a quarterly dashboard, a trend review and design improvements.

15 · What could break this · stop 1 of 2 · Four risks · the guard already in the design · an owner

Before you approve anything: what could break this, and what already guards against it. A popularity contest or a leadership broadcast: peers nominate, and the Featured Story criteria are published. Nominations drying up: they stay open, and every featured colleague nominates the next. A sensitive or contested story: facts and consent are checked before anything is shared. Stories clustering in two departments: we track representation from month one. Team, confirm before presenting: these owners are our proposal, not yet agreed with the curation panel, Internal Communications, HR, Legal or People Analytics.

The owners still need confirming with each team before launch. The point: every mitigation here is something you have already seen in the design. (Skippable when time is short.)

So here is the ask, in three words: approve the pilot. Pause, and let it sit.

THE ASK

Approve the pilot.

Start with one quarterly cycle and measure what changes.

01

Open nominations

Accept peer and leader nominations through a simple form.

03

Report what changed

Participation, reach, recognition and repeatable behaviour on a quarterly dashboard.

05 THE PILOT

16 · The ask stop 2 of 3 · One quarterly cycle · three commitments

We start with one quarterly cycle and measure what changes. One lap of this ring is one quarter. First, we open nominations to peers and leaders through a simple form. Second, we run one full cycle: capture, curate, feature and reinforce. Third, at quarter end we report what changed on a quarterly dashboard.

WHAT WE NEED

An executive sponsor · curation time from HR and Internal Communications · our existing channels — no new platform

After one quarter we come back with one recommendation: scale, adjust or stop.

16 · The ask stop 3 of 3 · What we need · scale, adjust or stop

What we need: an executive sponsor, curation time from HR and Internal Communications, and our existing channels. No new platform. After one quarter we come back with one recommendation: scale, adjust or stop. Team, confirm before presenting: this list is our proposal, not yet agreed with HR, Internal Communications or a sponsor.

Two people knew.

17 · Close stop 1 of 3 · Two people knew the chain

Remember the night shift: two people knew. Now the story is told, and the colleague it featured nominates the next and the next. Let the chain run; say nothing for a moment.
